Advertising.com Harnesses the Power of Digital Element's NetAcuity® to Serve Geotargeted Ads and Deliver Increased Revenue

Scenario

Advertising.com is a leading provider of performance-based interactive marketing solutions for advertisers and publishers and operates one of the industry's largest web networks. Early on, it recognized a huge demand from its customers—including colleges and universities, community banks, local newspapers, ISP's, retailers, city and state-level websites, local, and regional telecoms, etc.—for the ability to monitor, target and restrict content according to specific geographic and demographics in order to increase the reach, response, and effectiveness of their advertisers' online campaigns.

Solution

Advertising.com selected Digital Element, a business unit of Digital Envoy, and its market-leading NetAcuity geotargeting technology to reach their clients' target markets while maintaining the current customer base and achieving significant acquisition of qualified new customers.

“Once we recognized the demand from our customers and saw the value that geotargeting could bring to our offering, we set about finding the best solution available,” said Scott Ferber, Co-Founder of Advertising.com. “Luckily, we didn't have to look far. Digital Element clearly had the strongest offering on the market and brought the most value to our business. We have been a satisfied client and partner ever since.”

Advertising.com's clients have shown great interest in NetAcuity, namely because they directly benefit from geotargeting. Advertising.com's clients are eager to acknowledge the value and benefits of this technology.

Many clients have also recognized that geotargeting is particularly useful for international ad-serving. NetAcuity provides the ability to differentiate between US and non-US users allowing Advertising.com to analyze and evaluate data in real-time to make efficient ad-serving decisions worldwide. As a result, Advertising.com manages the effectiveness of campaigns, maximizing the return on investment for clients.

Success

As Digital Element's first customer, Advertising.com solidified the first mover advantage with the most accurate and wide reaching geotargeting technology available. Digital Element has been a valuable partner in increasing Advertising.com's
